Why hospitals in Bangalore need accreditation?

Bangalore, a prime IT destination of the world is soon priming itself to be the next Biotechnology and Medical tourism destination of the world driving the Indian economy, adding to the vision of a 'Suvarna Karnataka', Awareness of implementation and certification of internationally acceptable healthcare standards would definitely go a long way in achieving that status.

This is now the most opportune time for the Bangalore Hospitals to get the quality of their services accredited as per International Standards, to be able to really compete with the globally best Healthcare Organisations.

NABH, the Indian Healthcare Quality Accreditation is a member of the International Society for Quality Assurance (ISQua), making it on par with the best Healthcare Accreditation Systems of the world. The NABH advocates a very practical approach to the accreditation process, most suitable for Indian hospitals to adhere to.

Considering that almost 90% of hospitals are with beds less than 100, the (NABH) a constituent board of Quality Council of India (QCI) has recently launched accreditation standards for Small Health Care Organisations (SHCO) such as Nursing Homes and Single Speciality hospitals.
